Files Contest Against Nomination of W. W. Bridgers For District Attorney.

ALLEGES FRAUD AND INTIMIDATION

Alleging among other things that the votes of five dead men and those of 10 men who were in the penitentiary at the time of the July primaries, were polited, also that 160 persons who cast their votes at that time were not citizens of this country, C. L. Yowell, anti-ring candidate for district attorney, Saturday afternoon filed his petition in the 41st district court contesting the nomination of W. W. Bridgers, who was declared the nominee for that office at the district convention recently held.

As to the district convention the contestant says: "Contestant is in-

In precinct No. 1, the contestant al-leges there were 100 votes illegally marked by the judges in favor of the contestee. In precinct 2, it is charged that there were 125 votes marked in that way, when it was the desire of the voter to have his ticket marked for the contestant. The voters it was alleged were unable to tell for whom the ticket was marked and had to rei) upon the honesty of the person mark-ing it. In precinct 2, the contestant alleges that 75 votes were marked for the contestee when the voter ex-pressed his desire to vote for him.

Charges Armed Men at Polls.

The contestant further alleges that in precincts No. 1, 2, and 3, during the day of the election the voting places were surrounded by men who wer armed, all of them there in the inter armed, all of them there in the interest of the ticket upon which the contestee was running, and were there for the purpose of browbeating, intimidating, and interfering with the voter. It is alleged that threats of personal violence, or of putting the voter in jail if they refused to vote for the ring ticket were made.

In precinct No. 20, the contestant alleges that the presiding judge was an ardent supporter of the ring ticket, and that he acted as judge without any supervisor knowing or having the

The contestant alleges that in this pre-cinct he and his friends had one Val Verde, a Mexican of great influence in that section, and upon Val Verde they depended in having their votes properly marked. The contest-ant says that prior to the election a deputy sheriff arrested and placed Val Verde in custody, and it is alleged Verde in custody, and it is alleged that there was no charge against the that there was no charge against the defendant. "It developed afterwards," the petition reads, "that there was no charge against Val Verde at the time he was arrested. The sheriff under whom the officer was making the arrest, the contestant says, was a candidate on the ticket on which the con-testee was running.

The contestant further says that the officers of the election of the con-tested precincts allowed the official ballots to be out of the voting boxes. and that they were frequently seen on the outside of the voting places. It is alleged that some of the ballots were prepared at other places as di-rected by law.

The returns show that 3004 votes were polled for W. W. Bridgers, and 2734 for Vowell, giving Bridgers a plurality of 270.

In conclusion the contestant prays the court to review the certificates of nomination of Bridgers and certify his nomination as the Democratic nominee for district attorney to the secretary of state so that his name might be piaced on the official ballot for the general election in November.

to Know Who Furnished the Money.

BIG CORPORATIONS MAY BE QUIZZED

President Madero's revolution, which placed him in office, is to be investigated by the subcommittee of the United States senate, appointed to ascertain what American corporations or individuals, if any, financed the Maderista revolution, the present Orozco and Zapata revolutions and the Cuban revolution.

Albert B. Fall, United States senator from New Mexico, arrived in El Paso Friday afternoon to make an investigation of the Mexican situation as a member of the subcommittee of the committee on foreign relations. Senator Fall will remain here until Sunday afternoon, when he will proceed to Los Angeles, where he will meet senator William Alden Smith, chairman of the subcommittee, and together they will return to El Paso to continue the investigation in El Paso and also at Douglas and other border points if it is found necessary.

Senator Smith Will Join Fall.

The purpose of this investigation,

it is found necessary.

Senator Smith Will Join Fall.

The purpose of this investigation, as framed in the original resolution introduced by senator Nelson, was to investigate the connection any corporations or persons, owing silegiance to the United States, had in the original Madero-Diaz revolution or in factorial in the senate with the addition of senator Fall, who was added to the committee by unanimous vote of the senate because of his familiarity with the Mexican situation. Senator Smith will leave Grand Rapids, Mich., on Monday and will pass through El Paso en route to Los Angeles. He telegraphed senator Fall in El Paso to join him here, but senator Fall decided to continue to Los Angeles, stopping en route at Tecson. The subcommittee agreed that any two of the committee could take evidence and investigate, and as the other members were unable to get away at this time senators Fall and Smith will conduct the present investigation in the southwest.

Report of Standard Oil Ald.

Not only is this investigation to be made as to who is financing the present Orozco revolution, or rather whether or not American interests are behind it, but it is also to make an in-ent Orozco revolution, or rather whether or not American interests are belind it, but it is also to make an investigation of the Maderista revolution in order to determine, if possible, what connection the big corporations had with the financial part of the revolution against Diaz. Although senator Fall did not say so in an interview friday afternoon, it is generally understood that the resolution creating the subcommittee was introduced because subcommittee was introduced because of reports that the Standard Oil or its subsidiary companies had had a part in the financing of the Maderista revolution. This important point developed at a conference which senator

Senator Fall explained his reported effort to see Orozco while the latter was in Juarez. "I knew Orozco several years ago when he was a freighter for a number of mines in which I was, at that time, interested," senator Fall said. "I had heard reports that he had said. "I had heard reports that he had said something about where the money for the Madero revolution had come from. I knew Orozco when he was a freighter in Chihushua and talked with him here before the first revolution, regarding some contracts he wished to get for the mining companies in Mexico, in which I was at that time interested.

"I did not think he knew much about where the money for the Madero revolution came from. But I had confidence in him and thought he would tell me the truth. Of course he knew who gave it to him, but I doubted if he knew from whom the revolution had obtained this money. A statement to this effect also appeared in a manifesto which Enrile issued here and which purported to be signed by Orozco. In this and other statements, I had ben'd that Orozco had said that the money for the revolution had been but up by American corporations. It was for this purpose, and as a part of this investigation that I telegraphed mayor C. E. Kelly to know where he was. My reason was that he had stated that certain Americans had put up money, during the Madero revolution, and I wished to see him purely in connection with this investigation. When I found that I could not get here before he left I let the whole matter throp. I did not think he knew much about

"As for the report that I spolled the peace plans which minister Hernandez was making with Orozco, all I can say was making with Orozco, all I can say is that it was ridiculous. I made this denial as a point of personal privilege in the senate after I had waited for minister Calero to deny that Madero had made the statement that I had spoiled the peace plans. A day or two later minister Calero denied officially to senator Root that such was the case. I said in the senate at that time that I understood that the report had come from Mr. Llorente in E' Paso.

Desires to See Prosperity.

"Regarding the Mexican situation. I am here to learn what the real condition is. This investigation may continue some time if it is found that the tion is. This investigation may continue some time if it is found that the facts justify it. As senator from New Mexico, I have no other purpose than to see a cendition of peace and prosperity exist in Mexico and on the border. I do not care whether Diaz, or Madero, or Orozco or Gomes is president. But one-half of my constituents are Mexican people and have brothers in that country. Naturally I am interested in affairs there. Aside from that I have no interests.

"Regarding the attitude of the administration toward the Mexican situation, the president does not intend ation, the president does not intend to interfere. He has said so several times and is no doubt of the same
